

Jesse guzman

Per 1-2 ELA

2-6-17

EBA #3

Google is a popular search engine around the world. Millions are of people uses google to research, to find answers, and more. Many people are having concerns that google is making us less intelligent. According to “Is google making us stupid”, “the consequence of using google, and “How is google changing our memory” have many findings that could prove if google is making us less intelligent. I think google is making us less intelligent because google is distracting us from our work, false information, and changing the way that you are studying .

First, google is part of our society and using it in daily routine. We use it to do research for homework, class work, project and more. But using too much is making you less because google is affecting our intelligence. When we use google, there's going to be huge amount of ads in the website that you're researching and that's making you distracted. According to source

A it states, “if we're distracted, we understand less, and remember less.” The more we're distracted, the less we learn. That's really affecting our intelligence and giving us some false advertising. Some people in around the world just using google to just search up the answers and not fully understand the answer. If you're using google for an essay and you're searching something else not related to the essay you're distracting yourself. We easily get distracted from ads and sometimes we search up something else not related to the topic that your research.

Secondly, using google sometimes leads to a good consequence and a bad consequence, but here's mostly a bad consequence. Using google could be helpful in our essay or project but websites has some incorrect information in particular websites. According to source C it states, "the internet is filled with incorrect information which may lead to be being misinformation." Sometimes people knows that some websites has correct information because they have the source to provide some evidence. That only happens when you go on a official websites like history, PBS, etc. Mostly websites has incorrect answer like Wikipedia because someone could even edit the information and not providing sources to their evidence.

Finally, before google is even a search engine, books was our main search engine to solve and research our answers. Books helps people to memorize the information and actually understand the information. But when google officially becomes famous search engine like yahoo, bing, etc people just search up the answer and not fully understand the information. According to source C it states, "with search engines available all the time, we often don code the information in thermally, because when we need it, we will look it." People mostly just scan the website that they think has correct information and not bother to read the article. We actually have to read the whole book not like searching a website .Some people says that google doesn't make you less intelligent because google can you help you on homework and class.

In conclusion, using google could make you less smart for being distracted in google, false information, and effecting our way to study.